Location

Liège is situated at the gateway to Ardenne. Its geographic location means that it is exceptionally open to Europe, and a major motorway and rail network reinforces its international calling. Liège is promoted as being the transportation hub of the Meuse-Rhine Euregion. Meuse-Rhine Euregion, which brings together the regions of Liège, Aachen, Hasselt, Heerlen and Maastricht, covers a surface area of 10,500 km and is home to 3.7 million inhabitants. At a distance of just 30 km away from the Netherlands and 45 km away from Germany, Liège is also ideally located on the London - Brussels - Berlin high-speed TGV train route, not forgetting the Thalys link with Paris (barely 2 hours and 20 minutes).
| Getting to Liège by car

A highly comprehensive road and motorway network (E40, E25, E42, E313) makes it very easy to get to Liège by car from the major Belgian and European cities.

With its motorway network shaped like a seven-pointed star, Liège features among Europe's principal communication hubs.

The province is served by 250 kilometres of motorways. Thanks to its rapid traffic flows, Austria, Italy, Scandinavia or even the Eastern European countries can be reached in just one day.

The Cointe motorway tunnel, to the south of Liège city, was designated “Europe's safest tunnel” by 31 European Touring Clubs.

| Getting to Liège by plane

Liège Airport, also known as “Aéroport de Bierset”, is located in the heart of the motorway axes towards Brussels, Maastricht and Amsterdam, Anvers, Aachen, Luxembourg, Namur and Paris. It is Europe's eighth biggest airport in terms of air freight and ranks 38 in the world (24 in the world if only international traffic is taken into account).

Liège Airport is the first European airport to focus its policy on freight development. It also opens up major tourist destinations for passenger traffic.

It is Belgium’s third-biggest passenger airport, the two biggest in terms of passenger traffic being Brussels airport at Zaventem and Charleroi Bruxelles-Sud airport.

In terms of jobs, Liège Airport employs 10,000 people (directly and indirectly).
Getting to Liège by train

With its 3,454 kilometres of railway, the network of the Société Nationale des Chemins de fer Belges (SNCB) is one of Europe’s densest and most modern.

The city of Liège comprises three stations in the city centre and is equipped to accommodate high-speed trains (TGV). At the heart of the strategic London-Paris-Berlin triangle, today TGV, Thalys or ICE trains set off 8 times a day for France and even up to 10 times a day for Germany, not forgetting the numerous connections that can be planned daily on the Eurostar via Brussels.

Liège Country is also served by numerous local stations.

Finally, Liège residents have the use of a monumental station designed by Santiago Calatrava, which opened in 2009. A station with futuristic architecture that took ten years to build, directly accessible by motorway – and a draw for guided tours, its architecture is so impressive.

Getting to Liège by boat

Liège port is located in the heart of the major Rhine-Scheldt-Meuse delta, where the density of navigable routes is among the highest in the world. It is directly linked with the ports of Anvers (via the Albert canal), Rotterdam (via the Meuse and the Juliana canal) and Dunkirk. The authorities of the Port Autonome de Liège (P. A. L.) manage 26 different quays in and around the city of Liège. The complex Liège port ranks third among European river ports, behind the Rhine port of Duisburg (Germany) and the Autonomous Port of Paris. Liège is also happy to welcome owners of pleasure craft, who will be impressed by the Yacht Harbour and its famous dipper.
History

Liège province: a bit of history...

The Province of Liège extends across a surface area of 3,862 km and comprises a population of 1,067,685 inhabitants. Liège province has 84 municipalities and 4 districts: Huy, Liège, Verviers and Waremme.

The episcopal principality of Liège was a State of the German Holy Roman Empire, included within Westphalia, with Liège as its capital. The year 985 saw the birth of the episcopal principality and Notger, bishop of Liège from 972, became prince-bishop through receiving the County of Huy. This State endured for 800 years until the Liège Revolution (1789-1795), which led to the abolition of the principality of Liège.

When the Principality of Liège was reunified with revolutionary France, the département of Ourthe (sometimes spelt Ourte) was mainly founded on the incorporation of the Abbey Principality of Savelot-Malmedy, and also comprised the central part of the principality of Liège, 12 municipalities of the county of Namur, 26 of the duchy of Brabant, 34 of the duchy of Luxembourg and 3 localities arising from Trier and Cologne. This département was disbanded on the fall of the First Empire and replaced, in 1814, by the Province of Liège under Dutch rule.

Liège Province was born in 1836 out of an institutional affiliation between it and the Principality of Liège. Laid out according to the boundaries of the French département of Ourthe, it is characterised by the spirit of tolerance and freedom which prevails in our regions.

From the Principality, the Province of Liège also went on to preserve its coat of arms, which recall the former geographical boundaries within which, besides Liège and the Marquisate of Franchimont, the Duchy of Bouillon, the County of Homes and the County of Looz are also featured.

The existence of the provinces was formalised by the constitution of 1831; however, it took more than five years before the provincial law was promulgated on 30 April 1836. The first elections took place on 29 September of the same year and the first Provincial Council of Liège and the Permanent Deputation (now known as the provincial college) was set up immediately afterwards. Thanks to this provincial college and the authority of the Province as a whole, we saw the grand departures of the Tour de France (2004 & 2012), the Giro d’Italia (2006) or even the Vuelta d’Espagne (2009).

In 2008, the Province of Liège put on a big sound and light show in honour of the 1,000th anniversary of the death of Prince-Bishop Notger, remembering that “The farther back you can look, the farther forward you are likely to see.” (Churchill).

In September 2015, the Province produced and staged a unique showing of a major urban opera called “Karbon Kabaret”, which drew several thousands of people to Place Saint-Lambert in Liège.

In July 2017, the Province was also behind the 19th visit to the region by the Tour de France on its two stages between Verviers and Liège.

Liège is renowned not only for its welcoming spirit, but also for its partying and nightlife. There is, of course, Le Carré, a block of streets where pubs line up to offer Liège residents and tourists the opportunity to party till dawn all year round. However, we also advise you to take a seat on the terraces of the Place de Marché as soon as the sun casts its first rays. And then there are the events that take place throughout the year: the music festivals in Spa, Liège, Verviers... the numerous carnivals in Malmedy and Stavelot in particular, the Fêtes du XV août every 15 August in Outremeuse, the Fêtes de Wallonie, the Village Gaulois in the summer, Belgium’s biggest Christmas Village in the winter and so many more things besides. Believe us, you won’t be short of opportunities to enjoy yourself in Liège province. Festivities are everywhere.

In February 2016, the Préhistosite in Ramioul was turned into a 30-hectare museum in the forest of the Ramioul cave (a listed heritage site). Culture

A rich and varied heritage, a secular history, a favoured geographical location, dense communication networks and internationally renowned infrastructures are so many assets enjoyed by Liège province so that it can build up a sustained policy in the cultural field.

Let’s start with Liège...

Liège has one of the world’s biggest collections of ar- chaeology, weapons, religious art and Meuse art, decorative arts and glassware. Some 5,500 items can thus be discovered at the Grand Curtius, which was renovated from top to bottom and inaugurated in 2009.

Housed in the minor brothers’ convent, the Museum of Walloon Life offers visitors a new look at Wallonia, from the 19th century to the present day. Items, testi- monies, films, photographs and documents have been collected for nearly a hundred years. They are attracti- vely presented under the use of modern scenography. Deconsecrated and attached to the museum, Saint-An- toine church is part of the minor brothers’ convent and is integrated with the museum complex. Restored and transformed into a cultural space, it plays host among others to high-quality temporary exhibitions, such as the RECIPROCITY Design Triennial (see “Design” theme).

| The Museum of Walloon Life

Wallonia’s leading stage, the Théâtre de Liège crosses borders for its collaborations with prestigious interna- tional institutions: the Festival of Avignon, the National Theatre of Korea, the Venice Biennial, and more... . Very large-scale renovations have resulted in a Théâtre de Liège located within the Société libre d’Emulation building, opposite the University of Liège, right in the heart of the city since the end of 2013. Aesthetically, its architecture favours timber, concrete and glass for a total area of 7,800 m2, blending neo-classicism and contemporary design. Columns, mouldings and gilding co-exist with Vitra furnishing designed by Jean Prouvé, a famous French designer.

It is currently occupied by the federal Justice service, being also the seat of both the provincial college and council and housing the Governor’s office.

The baptismal font of Saint-Barthélemy collegiate church

The baptismal font of the Saint-Barthélemy collegiate church is both aesthetically and technically a true masterpiece of Mosan art and is considered as one of the seven wonders of Belgium. Amay - Château de Jehay

Château de Jehay, a listed part of Wallonia’s outstanding heritage, is currently undergoing indispensable in-depth restoration. Two exhibition spaces are housed in the castle’s dependencies. They are closed at the moment, but once they are reopened they will have abundant collections on show: “The Jehay Cabinet of Curiosities” and the subject of “Lady Moyra”. The collections’ Irish origins are linked with a tourist film, directed by Patrick Alen. Taken together, the collections enable a virtual tour of the castle. Access is still open to the domain’s park, gardens and a remarkable one-hectare kitchen garden, which is located within a walled enclosure.

Remouchamps - Caves

After exploring grandiose halls – true natural cathedrals – on foot, return by boat by Europe’s longest subterranean navigable route (700 m.). You can combine the tour with a visit to the Monde Sauvage Safari Parc, located close by (see “KIDS” theme).

The forts

Twice – in a quarter of a century – Liège province had the painful “honour” of starting conflicts that drew Belgium and, beyond it, the whole of Western Europe and even part of the world into the destructive fury. The fortified position of Liège, established at the end of the 19th century, underwent the assault of August 1914 and then, rearmed and consolidated, that of May 1940. No fewer than ten forts can still be visited (including the fort of Barchon, Loncin, Battice, Aubin-Neufchâteau, and more), just like the other memorial sites represented by the citadel of Huy and the Allies’ Memorial in Cointe (Liège). The numerous sites linked with the tragic events of the Rundstedt counter-offensive in the winter of 1944-1945 are well worth the detour (see “Memorial Tourism” theme).

Modave Castle

Modave castle was built in the Middle Ages on a rocky spur 200 feet above the valley of Hoyoux river. One can enjoy a magnificent view over the 1,100 acres surrounding nature reserve. A remarkable 17th-century stuccowork decorates the ceilings while the walls are covered with carved panelling, tapestries and large paintings. The furniture, with some unique 18th and 19th century pieces fits perfectly into this historic setting. An audio guide available in eight languages enables visitors to discover the special features of the 25 castle’s rooms. Visit that exceptional place that belongs to the Major Heritage of Wallonia since 1993.

But also...

| The town of Visé or City of the Goose |

Visé is known for the charm of its old centre, but also for the fêtes des Gildes, a unique feature and local tradition just like “Visé-style goose”. The history and ceremonies of the three Guilds – the Royal Company of Ancient Crossbow-Makers, the Royal Company of the Ancient Harquebusiers and the Royal Company of the Frank Harquebusiers are evoked in three separate museums.

| Verviers, Walloon capital of water |

The Wool and Fashion Tourist Centre offers an exploration of the various stages of making woollen cloth, via a show trail called “From the Thread to Fashion”. Through machinery and testimonies from textile workers of the period, visitors are immersed in the atmosphere of the golden age of the Verviers textile industry, which is linked with its river, the Vesdre. In the former cloth factory in Bonvoisin, la Maison de l’eau has an interactive and dynamic aim. Audiovisual montages about the Vesdre and working with wool, a model of the Gileppe barrage, and the show trail take an educational look at the importance of water in the history of Verviers.

Liège, Metropolis of Design

The city has taken on a new charisma through its multiple iconic projects, including the creation of the monumental Liège-Guillemins railway station – designed by Santiago Calatrava – or the renovation of the Opéra Royal de Wallonie and, more recently, of the Théâtre de Liège. For about ten years, architectural modernisation has been spectacular there, but creative energy, too, has been continuously making itself more and more manifest: trendy restaurants, creators of clothing, accessories or jewellery, art galleries, boutiques – design has become an established feature of Liège, turning the city into a true design metropolis. This is evidenced by the fact that, every three years, an international design festival moves into districts in all four corners of the city for a whole month.

Increasingly modern architecture

Including:

| The Liège-Guillemins high-speed train station |

A grandiose work of art with a Futurist allure, realised by the architect Santiago Calatrava. Inaugurated in 2009 after... ten years of works, it transformed the urban landscape and has assumed its place as the symbol of Liège’s renovation. An architectural stroll, with or without guide, is worth the detour...

| Opéra Royal de Wallonie |

Renovation and extension works at the Opéra Royal de Wallonie, built in 1820, have made way for a true temple of music equipped with some 1,030 extremely comfortable seats and, above all, a stage and machinery that are among the most high-tech in the world! The ORW is renowned for its excellence in interpreting the likes of Rossini, Bellini and Donizetti or Wagner, and draws a large audience of Belgian, German, Dutch and French spectators.

La Médiacité is a 6.5-hectare commercial complex, inaugurated in 2009, that comprises around 160,000 m² of economic, cultural and leisure activities, its main theme being the audio-visual and the media. From a design point of view, the commercial centre is coiffed by a monumental roof designed by Israeli artist Ron Arad.

Concretely, la Médiacité is made up of a shopping centre (45,000 m², around 130 shops and restaurants); a cluster of enterprises dedicated to the audio-visual and multimedia, called “Pôle Image de Liège”; 2,350 parking spaces (payable); an “entertainment” station run by national television broadcaster RTBF; television and film studios and an ice rink.

Cité Miroir

Built on the site of the former la Sauvenière swimming pool, where the architectural gamble was to keep the two basins intact, Cité Miroir is a space for citizenship and a cultural complex. Activities such as temporary exhibitions, permanent exhibitions, theatre, documentary cinema and conference events are on the programme there.

De Tour des finances

La Tour Paradis, often called the Financial Tower of Liège, is a skyscraper in the Guillemins railway station district of Liège. Its height of 118 metres – 136 with the antenna – makes it Wallonia’s tallest building. It accommodates some 1,100 financial workers based in Liège and replaces the two former buildings of SPF Finances which were demolished in 2015.
| Le Théâtre de Liège

Wallonia’s leading stage, the Théâtre de Liège crosses borders for its collaborations with prestigious international institutions: the Festival of Avignon, the National Theatre of Korea, the Venice Biennial, and more. Very large-scale renovations have resulted in a Théâtre de Liège located within the Société libre d’Emulation building, opposite the University of Liège, right in the heart of the city since the end of 2013. Aesthetically, its architecture favours timber, concrete and glass for a total area of 7,800 m², blending neo-classicism and contemporary design. Columns, mouldings and gilding co-exist with Vitra furnishing designed by Jean Prouvé, a famous French designer.

| Le Cinéma Sauvenière

The not-for-profit association les Grignoux, a cultural social economy enterprise, manages eight cinemas plus a café-gallery and brasserie on three Liège sites: le Parc, le Churchill and le Sauvenière, established in 2008. These cinemas showcase the best recent films in the original version, with subtitles (pre-premières with producers and film teams, special evenings, conference debates with participants representing associated themes, etc.) and organise about fifty concerts every year. The “Architecture moderne et contemporaine 1895-2014, Liège”, published by Mardaga in 2014, devotes several pages to each of these cinemas.

| The Museum of Walloon Life

Housed in the minor brothers’ convent, the Museum of Walloon Life offers visitors a new look at Wallonia from the 19th century to the present day. It has undergone major renovations that now give it new outlooks – at the design level in particular.

Walks in Liège province

Liège province abounds in varied landscape. The country’s top highlights, such as the fenlands – a biotope that is unique in Europe –, the great lakes, the mysterious forests, the steep-sided valleys of the Ourthe and the Ambliève, Ardenne, the flowery orchards of the Pays de Herve, the marvellous Condroz – land of stones and torrents –, the vast plains of Hesbaye, one of Europe’s most fertile terrains, and the valley of the Meuse that looks so different at Huy and Visé are sumptuous, harmonious and contrasting landscapes that are just a short journey away.

Liège province is now offering attractive trails, selected according to very specific criteria. Be it on foot, by bike, horse, car or motorbike (13 signposted routes), possibilities for active relaxation abound, presenting different degrees of difficulty in order to appeal to as many people as possible.

Alongside the some 5,000 km of signposted walks (more than 800 itineraries), the 13 RA-Vel cycle paths (Réseau Autonome de Voies Lentes), pré-RAVeL, and new sections crossing Liège territory will no doubt be a boost to open-air tourism.

In this particularly favourable setting, the Tourism Federation of the Province of Liège (FTPL) offers an alternative gentle mode of transport that is appealing and non-polluting and opens up horizons: the electric bike. There is a range for hire at 6 tourist sites in the province: the Museum of Walloon Life (centre of Liège), the Domaine provincial de Wégimont (Soumagne), Blegny-Mine, the Domaine de Palogne (Ferrières), Château de Harzé and Maison du Parc- Botrange (Robertville). On hiring bikes, tourists will receive suggested route itineraries starting out from the site concerned.

Five tourist regions

| Around Aywaille

The steep-sided valleys of the Ourthe and the Ambliève form one of the most beautiful backdrops of the mysterious Belgian Ardenne. The site of the vale of Ninglinspo (the only rapids in Belgium) and the Fonds de Quarreux (rounded quartzite rocks obstructing the bed of the Ambliève) are listed parts of Wallonia’s outstanding heritage. Mainly rural, the Ourthe-Amblève can be explored on foot, by bike or on horseback. No fewer than 900 km of signposted paths enable a getaway through forests, in the heart of typical villages or along rivers. Some 700 km of cycle trails – cycle tourism on little tranquil and picturesque roads or mountain-biking on rough terrain and with spectacular backdrops – are also part of the package. Not forgetting almost 150 km of equestrian itineraries amid rural and wild surroundings.
Located at the confluence of the Meuse and the Hoyoux, the Huy region draws its abundance from the Hoyoux valley, which leads towards the forests and landscapes of a slightly wild region. In Hesbaye-Meuse, set off on signposted trails. Around fifteen walks and a cycle trail allow you to tour a magnificent architectural, landscaped and natural heritage. The Parc naturel des Vallées de la Burdinale et de la Mehaigne, located in Hesbaye, is distinguished by its forest ecosystems, valley-bottom prairies and vast agricultural expanses. It offers 18 walking trails, 4 mountain-bike circuits and 2 cycle trails, all signposted.

In Liège, two steps away from the historical heart, the paths on the slopes of the citadel are privileged places were nature has been left intact and where the good life and good walks can be found with 13 km of trails and astonishing views across the city and the Meuse valleys. On the Visé side, the splendid Montagne Saint-Pierre international network of walking trails is laid out between Geer and Meuse. These walks start from seven information points scattered across the cross-border territory at the crossroads of the Netherlands, Flanders and Wallonia.

The Cantons de l’Est region, where German is also spoken, is located in the eastern part of Liège province. It is the site of the High Fens Nature Reserve, the country’s oldest and most expansive natural park. This natural gem is home to specific flora and fauna, which can be explained to you by the guides at the Maison du Parc Naturel Hautes Fagnes-Eifel (Botrange Nature Centre), which is the departure point for well-maintained footpaths. However, the Cantons de l’Est can also be visited by bicycle (18 themed routes) or even by car, following the signposted itineraries. The region boasts a network of 24 e-bike hiring points (electrically assisted bikes) and 12 battery charging stations. Incidentally, this is where the famous Vennbahn can be found. Considered to be one of Belgium’s longest cycle routes on former rail tracks, the Vennbahn crosses through three countries: Germany, Belgium and Luxembourg. On a 125 km trail with an average incline of 2%, from Aachen to Troisvierges passing through the High Fens, you will be able to explore nature, the charm of the border regions, and historical anecdotes that revolve around the Vennbahn and its abundant past.

The Parc Naturel Hautes Fagnes-Eifel takes in 12 municipalities (Raeren, Eupen, Baelen, Jalhay, Stavelot, Malmedy, Waimes, Büttgenbach, Büllingen, Amel, St-Vith and Reuland) and is part of a German-Belgian cross-border natural park. Multiple landscapes can be explored: from the impressive Hertogenwald forest in the north, passing through the High Fens Plateau, the lakes or the valley of the Our. In the winter, the region unfolds its charms by revealing to skiers the country’s most attractive snowy landscapes. A network of well-maintained slopes and paths guarantees all the fun of mountain sports. Belgium’s highest point is found there: the Signal de Botrange (694 metres).
Around Spa

The city of Spa enjoys an exceptional and particularly intact natural environment, due, in particular, to the harnessing of large quantities of mineral water. The focus, therefore, is on green leisure pursuits. In the land of the sources, a network of signposted walks or cycle trails takes visitors on an exploration of very special natural treasures (103 walks and 13 mountain-bike trails, all signposted).

Cross-border trails

The Three Borders region presents an undulating landscape with forest-covered craters and no fewer than 140 signposted paths and trails. With regard to tourism, the Three Borders region extends along the Dutch and German border, from the banks of the Meuse to the fringes of the Hertogenwald forest, and covers the valleys of the Gueule, the Gulpe and the Voer. The meeting point of the three borders is located at the “Trois Bornes”, on the edge of Gemmenich (B), Vaals (NL) and Aachen (D).

RAVeL

The RAVeL network of trails is based essentially on service routes along waterways as well as on disused railways and former district routes. RAVeL is reserved for slow users of non-motorised forms of transport. These are mainly pedestrians, cyclists, persons of reduced mobility, skaters or even horseriders, when conditions permit.

About fifteen years ago, the RAVeL was set up with a view to offering a network of pleasant, non-motorised itineraries, combining – across Wallonia – ways through green zones along navigable routes and secure urban crossings. Since then, sections have been added apace and have been getting more numerous every year, thus allowing users to circulate and explore Liège province totally undisturbed, without having to worry about road traffic – for more than 600 kilometres.

The Tourism Federation of the Province of Liège issues the RAVeL Map, which details the whole of the network and allows cycle tourists, in particular, to enjoy Liège province. This map has already been published in several editions. At issue is the continuous development of the RAVeL network, but mainly the enthusiasm of the public – mainly Flemish, Dutch and German – for these gentle excursion itineraries, totally free of motorised forms of transport. The map can be downloaded on the FTPL website www.liegetourisme.be

The chalky massif of Saint-Pierre Mountain

Memorial tourism

DTwice – in a quarter of a century – Liège province experienced the tragic misfortune of starting conflicts that drew Belgium and, beyond it, the whole of Western Europe and even part of the world into the destructive fury. The “Fortified Position of Liège”, established at the end of the 19th century, underwent the assault of August, 1914 and then, rearmed and consolidated, that of May 1940. These forts are often well-preserved, although some are no longer accessible. However, no fewer than ten forts can still be visited, along with other memorial locations such as the Huy citadel, the Allies’ Memorial in Cointe (Liège) and numerous other sites associated with the tragic events of the counter-offensive of Rundstedt in winter 1944-45, which equally deserve attention.

As the word “tourism” comes up, it might not be trivial to insist on the fact that it, and “memorial”, are not contradictions in terms. On the contrary. Deeply respectful of the dramas that unfolded here and there – in Loncin or Chaudfontaine, earth is dug where dozens, if not hundreds, of human remains lie –, “memorial tourism” is both an opportunity to remember past sufferings and a reminder of our good fortune in living in a peaceful Europe today.

| Fort d’Aubin-Neufchâteau
Tests for the secret Röchling shells |

Built from 1935 to 1940 in the context of the Fortified Position of Liège, Aubin-Neufchâteau fort was intended to block the Aachen-Visé-Liège access route and the surrounding valleys. It thus sealed off the North-Eastern front of the Fortified Position.

| Fort de Battice
Frescoes that speak a thousand words |

The Battice fort is one of the four new forts built in the 30s, more precisely from 1934 to 1937. In May 1940, it was subject to a twelve-day siege under fire by heavy artillery and German aircraft. On 21 May, during an air raid, a bomb dropped by a Stuka hit a combat block on account of an unfortunate ricochet effect, killing 26 of its occupants. The extent of the damage can still be surveyed in the entrance to the little museum that is housed there.

| Fort de Barchon
Extensively rearmed and re-concreted for 1940 |

Built according to the Brialmont plan in 1888, Barchon was the northernmost fort, along with Pontisse. It was the first to capitulate, on 8 August 1914, following commandment problems and the threat of the garrison’s asphyxiation, after just 4 days of combat.
| Fort d’Eben-Emael
One of the most powerful forts in Europe neutralised in no time

Built from 1932 until 1935, in the heart of Montagne Saint-Pierre, Eben-Emael fort appears in the form of a vast triangle bordered to the North East by the Caster trench. This impressive overhang, which accommodates a veritable subterranean city, was one of the most powerful fortifications in Europe.

www.fort-eben-emael.be

| Fort d’Embourg
Stormed twice under the devastating fire by the enemy artillery

Embourg fort has the particularity of being trapezoidal and also being one of the smallest, with a garrison of some 350 men. The scene of skirmishes between 6 and 12 August 1914, it was to be bombarded without interruption on 12 August at 1 p.m. and on 13 August at 8 p.m., the moment of its surrender.

| Fort de Flémalle
There is no escaping half-tonne bombs!

A large quadrangular fort in the Fortified Position of Liège, Flémalle was one of the twelve defenders of the Ardent City conceived by Brialmont in 1888. Occupying a strategic position overhanging the Meuse and the Liège-Namur road, it was the scene of bitter fighting in 1914. It had to withstand attacks by Stukas in May 1940.

| Fort de Hollogne
A small fortress from 1914

Hollogne fort is one of the six small forts which, with six other large complexes, formed the Fortified Position of Liège.

| Fort de Lantin
An exploratory show trail: life in a fort

Hidden in a wooded massif in Hesbaye countryside, three kilometres away from its neighbour in Loncin, the little Lantin fort is the only one in the Fortified Position of Liège not to have been modified since 1914. It constitutes one of the last well-preserved vestiges of military architecture from the end of the 19th century.

| Fort de Loncin
A necropolis for eternity…

Loncin fort is the most famous of the Brialmont forts. On 15 August 1914, under the blows of “Big Bertha”, one of its two powder magazines exploded, crushing 350 of its defenders beneath its rubble.

| Fort de Pontisse
The first to take a heavy pounding from Big Bertha

On a current surface area of just over 3 hectares, the fort was built between 1888 and 1892. It required 100,000 m³ of concrete and the work of 500 people.

| Fort de Tancrémont
The last stand

Inaugurated on 8 August 1937, Tancrémont fort was one of the new works in the Fortified Position.

| Fort de Huy
A prison for hostages, communists and resistance fighters

Today, the fort has become a place of remembrance of the Second World War. The museum space enlightens visitors on prisoners’ living conditions in the fort, daily life during the Occupation and the liberation of the town of Huy.

Allies’ Memorial
Dedicated to the fighters of 1914

Overhanging the city of Liège, on the flank of the Cointe hill, the Allies’ Memorial forms an impressive architectural ensemble. It is made up of a civil monument, the votive tower with a large esplanade at its foot, and a church that is often called a “basilica”.

Henri-Chapelle memorial and American cemetery

This cemetery, where 7,992 American soldiers lie, extends across a surface area of 23 hectares. The memorial comprises a chapel and a museum. These two buildings are linked by an impressive colonnade adorned with the seals of the States and Territories of the Union. The colonnade's pillars bear the names of 450 missing whose remains were never found or could not be identified.

Neuville-en-Condroz memorial and American cemetery

On 37 hectares, the graves of 5,328 American soldiers are aligned in an immense Greek cross. These soldiers fell in Belgium, but also in Germany too, around Aachen and during the breach of the Siegfried line.
Memorial Museum of the Régiment 12e de Ligne Prince Léopold - 13e de Ligne

The museum exhibits its collections on an area of some 500 m². Via a chronological trail, it traces the history of a very illustrious elite regiment, from the Belgium Revolution of 1830 – from which the regiment originates – to the present day.

Musée 40-45 Memories

This private museum exhibits its own collections of objects found and acquired over the years and made up of military equipment, including devices and American objects as well as German propaganda (badges, weapons, photographs and maps). It also evokes civil life during WW2 (products from the period) and uniforms of the countries at war (army and resistance).

WWII Memory Museum

The WWII MEMORY MUSEUM is a museum dedicated to the history of the Second World War through uniforms and the equipment used by the 2 warring sides. Visitors will be able to dive back into this period of history thanks to 11 dioramas containing more than 70 mannequins that are fully equipped and staged in a very realistic way.

Baugnez 44 Historical Center

Opened in 2007, this is already considered to be one of the most attractive museums on the Battle of the Ardennes. The various major operations are explained there, 16 scenes are recreated and 120 display cases are on show.

December 44 Historical Museum

The December 44 Historical Museum is the fruit of the passion shared by two history fans: Philippe Gillain and Gérard Grégoire. The former collects military equipment and uniforms abandoned by the Waffen-SS. The latter, a La Gleize native, experienced the combats of 1944; he has always felt a drive to perpetuate the memory of the battle of La Gleize, to educate generations to come on the causes and effects of war through a historical heritage brought to life by vivid scenography.

Remember Museum 39-45

A fascinating museum, among the most interesting in its genre on account of the location's extraordinary human character – each unit of reconstruction (more than 70 mannequins!), each flag, item of clothing and object is associated with true stories and people whose names, face and story can be discovered.

Ensival Historical Museum

The Historical Museum in Ensival is a private museum intended to be seen by all! Its aim? Never to forget the sufferings and the lives lost for our shared liberty during the 40-45 war.

Musée Truschbaum

The Meuse in Liège province – River tourism

Departing from Namur: this is one of the Meuse’s most attractive profiles, with riverbanks lined with dwellings at the foot of wooded valleys. The first town to mark arrival in the province of Liège is Huy. Huy offers the atmosphere of a tourist town, and is considered to be the gateway to the Ardennes for many Dutch and Flemish visitors. Landscape assets: Huy features rocky cliffs, forests and dwellings alongside the Meuse. Cultural assets: the Citadel, the Collegiate Church and the Fort. Shopping opportunities in the town centre.

Two ports are available to pleasure-boats and the RAVeL runs along the waterway, amid an attractive setting, to the village of Flône. On leaving Huy, the Meuse widens and becomes less cosy. The wooded slopes give way to growing urbanisation and industrialisation, the closer one gets to Liège.

Visé: the river atmosphere is very present and the Town of Visé lives with its river: harbour master’s house, yacht harbour, Robinson Island… The river’s infrastructure increases the closer one gets to the Netherlands. There is a “knooppunt” (node)-type tourist signalling system, and the RAVeL near the village of Lanaye is highly frequented on account of its lock, which is destined to become an attraction. The Tchéroux club allows a number of sailing activities on the body of water and Montagne Saint-Pierre is a not-to-be-missed place to visit.

Val Mosan boat at Huy

A trip aboard the Val Mosan allows tourists to explore some wonders of Huy’s architectural heritage: fort, collegiate church, Maison Batta… One-hour mini-cruises on the Meuse and one-day cruises to Namur and Liège.

Liège city: at Liège, at the point of la Boverie park – a true Liège leisure scene –, the Meuse divides into two. Regional Products

| Le boulet à la liégeoise |

Also known as “boulet sauce lapin” or “boulet sauce chasseur”, the Liège-style meatball is probably the most typical dish of the province of Liège. Concretely, it involves one or two large meatballs prepared on the basis of beef and veal mincemeat – or pork and beef –, breadcrumbs, shallots and parsley, to which Liège syrup and bay leaves are added during cooking. This sauce bears the name of rabbit sauce but does not contain rabbit. It is said to have got its name from its inventor, Mrs Géraldine Lapin. A real institution in Liège brasseries and chip shops, and known throughout Belgium, this dish is traditionally served accompanied by chips, (hence the phrase “boulets-frites”), mayonnaise and lightly seasoned salad or apple sauce. Like all traditional dishes, there are almost as many recipes as there are people who make them, each adding their own “little touch”.

| Liège Waffle |

The Liège waffle is made on the basis of a dough fermented with yeast, like a standard waffle, but using pearl sugar. Traditionally, it has no corners and is eaten hot when served by itinerant traders.

| Chocolate |

Two master chocolatiers in Liège province:

Jean-Philippe Darcis

At age 25, he opened his first atelier. A child of the Pays de Herve, he turned naturally to regional products. Heir to a long tradition of Verviers chocolate-making, he caught a passion for chocolate, set up his new laboratories, and launched his first tasting rooms. Known by his peers thanks to a know-how that allies tradition and creativity, he represented Belgium at the World’s Fair in Shanghai in 2010.

Jean Galler

Jean Galler was born in desserts… From the family-run patisserie founded by his grandfather in 1930, he retains the pleasure of working with butter and cream. At age 16, he was drawn towards chocolate; this living substance fascinated him – he experimented, created and was soon delighting his first customers.

In order to perfect his craft and explore other flavours, he went on to study in Basel in Switzerland, then under Gaston Lenôtre in Paris. At age 21, he set up his business. 35 years later, the fundamentals have remained the same: passion for chocolate, love of work well done and permanent creativity.

Today, with a team of more than 100 workers, he conceives, produces and sells pralines, ices, pastries, filled chocolate bars and slabs of chocolate, Langues de Chat, spreads, little chocolates, and more…

Having forged his reputation in his region, Galler is now present across the Belgian market, at more than 2,000 sales points. Galler also has his own network of shops in Belgium, France, Japan, Dubai, etc.

La Chocolaterie Galler constantly innovates and is regularly honoured with official distinctions, the most illustrious of which is certainly that of “Fournisseur Breveté de la Cour de Belgique” received in 1994 and the Innovation award for the concept “CHOCOLAT-THÉ®” at the Franchise trade show in 2002.
Beer

Liège province also earns its gastronomic renown from outstanding brewing know-how. In total, there are 14 breweries (13 artisanal + the impressive Jupiler brewery) entirely making their own products. By opening their doors to the public (mostly by appointment), they invite beer-drinkers to discover their manufacturing secrets and sample their beverages. These breweries include:

Brasserie de l’Abbaye du Val-Dieu

In order to perpetuate the tradition, the brewery, which is housed within the walls of the abbey (13th century), took its inspiration from the recipes used in the past by the brewer monks of Val-Dieu. The current beers are therefore true abbey beers, top fermentation, unpasteurised, simple, free of flavourings and brewed according to the old infusion method. Another particularity: here, the master brewer is... a woman. But tradition is not only found in these beers. Indeed, Aubel Country abounds in products that showcase the region’s culinary traditions. Apples and pears that will give rise to cider and Liège syrup ripen in the surrounding orchards. Just as the green pastures where the cattle graze will produce exquisite cold cuts.

Brasserie Grain d’Orge

Located in the little village of Hombourg, the “Grain d’Orge” brewery is a microbrewery that specialises in making exclusive beers (Hervoise, Aubel Double and Triple, 2 Nigauds...). The house beers are la Brice, a blonde, and la Joup, a brown, a white beer called La Canaille, along with a festive beer called La Grelotte. Grain d’Orge opens its doors to tours and offers tasting in its dining room on the brewery floor.

www.grain-dorge.com

Brasserie de Bellevaux

Created by a pharmacist wanting a change of lifestyle, la Brasserie de Bellevaux is proud of drawing its water, beer’s main ingredient, from a natural source in the village. The pure water of Ardenne, with its gentle character, makes it possible to bring out all the ingredients’ flavours and brew an amiable Brown and an elegant Blonde throughout the year. Two other beers can also be sampled as the seasons come and go: the sparkling White announces the spring and, at the end of the summer, when autumn makes its appearance, this fresh-tasting beer makes way for a Black with a pronounced taste and a creamy head. The beers of La Brasserie de Bellevaux are neither filtered nor pasteurised. They are “living” beers and are naturally slightly cloudy.

www.brasseriedebellevaux.be

Brasserie C, located in the historical district of the city of Liège, produces la Curtius, a complex and elegant blonde beer with a light taste and refreshing flavours. Made up of various barley malts and wheat, its base gives it a pleasant lightness while the composition of aromatic hops flowers lends it a subtly bitter, flowery and fruity flavour. Its unique and evolving taste is the outcome of several stages of fermentation, carried out over several months.

Brasserie de Marsinne

La Brasserie de Marsinne opened for business at the beginning of 2013. The beer that is currently being produced there is Leopold 7. This brewery is the work of two young brewers and is actively and concretely committed to sustainable production: residual water management, 98% recycled packaging, no label (and therefore no glue)...

Even back then, Jim Murray underlined the quality of production through his famous “Whisky Bible”. The Belgian Owl has been available from specialist resellers throughout Belgium since 2008. These resellers promoted the product and shared a passion for this first Belgian whisky originating from crops grown in the country. 2010 and 2011 saw recognition of the quality of work delivered by The Owl Distillery, through both international contests such as “World Selection” or “Le Mondial de Bruxelles” and publications such as Jim Murray’s Whisky Bible. </tr>
</table>

Pèkèt is a grain alcohol distilled in the Meuse region and more specifically in Liège province. It is flavoured with juniper berries, which give it this characteristic taste that is highly appreciated by connoisseurs, who drink it natural but chilled.

One of the places favoured by Liège residents – and tourists – for tasting it is la Maison du Pèkèt next to the City Hall, right in the centre of Liège. With lemon, strawberry and... chocolate. Take your pick.
| Tarte au riz |

This typical Verviers speciality gave rise to the birth of the Seigneurie de la Vervi-Riz in 1990 and conferred an important status on the region of Verviers, both in Belgium and abroad.

If tarte au riz originates in the Verviers region, it is probably thanks to the richness of the milk from the nearby Herve region and to farm-fresh eggs. These two raw materials are the pledge of the success of a good rice tart.

| Liégeois salad |

Liégeois salad is a salad composed of green beans, potatoes and diced bacon, which is eaten warm. It can be offered as a starter, but is most often served as the main – if not only – dish. Although now occasionally served in the summer, it is a culinary speciality typically served in the winter.

Although it is enough by itself, it is sometimes accompanied by sausages or slices of streaky bacon, or served on lettuce.

| Le lacquemant |

This is a fine wheat-based wafer, cut into two lengthwise, filled, and coated in candied sugar syrup flavoured with orange blossom.

| Café Liégeois |

Café liégeois is a cold dessert based on slightly sweetened coffee, coffee-flavoured ice cream and whipped cream.

For a little bit of (big) history, during the 1914-1918 war, the battle of the Liège forts gave the allies precious time. Although the city itself did not put up any resistance, the fighting by the Belgian field army supported by the forts prompted a lively interest in Liège and earned it the Legion of Honour awarded by France. In Paris, the name of café viennois was changed to café liégeois (also in Paris, rue de Berlin and its metro station were rechristened in favour of “Liège”).

| La bouquette |

La bouquette or vôte (in Liège Walloon) is a leavened pancake made with buckwheat flour, often enhanced with raisins.
Did you know? From Huy to Liège, no fewer than 19 vineyards run by passionate craftsmen, professional or amateur, are open for tours, mostly during the summer and by appointment.

Fancy sampling this abundance, perhaps still little-known but becoming more and more renowned? The Tourism Federation of the Province of Liège has published a map showing the “Route des Vins” that can be taken in its region. The map is available on its website, among other places.

| “4 Flavour Routes in Liège Province”

Artisans who produce wine, but also beer, cheese and chocolate, can be explored in the brochure published by the Tourism Federation of the Province of Liège titled “4 Flavour Routes in Liège Province”.

No fewer than 15 tourable (micro) breweries, 23 artisan chocolatiers, 23 amateur and professional winegrowers, along with 23 artisan cheese-makers, are given pride of place in this 110-page edition. The richly illustrated publication also comprises themed museums, anecdotes and extensive, hand-picked topical information. In total, 84 producers are described through the making and sale of their products of course, but also the possibility of touring their facilities (for some of them) and taking part in courses or workshops, etc.

The brochure is published in four free monolingual versions (French, Dutch, English and German). It can also be downloaded from the FTPL internet site:

48 gastronomic confraternities in Liège province

A gastronomic confraternity is mainly an association of persons who, in a spirit of FRIENDSHIP and FRATERNITY, share a desire to rediscover their roots while STANDING UP for their region.

Every confraternity is the story of its region. Most of them are food-related, which means that they give pride of place to certain often-forgotten local or regional culinary customs or traditions, which are always a delight to discover. They also become the guarantors of the authenticity of one or the other recipe, one or the other manufacturing secret pertaining to a solid – or liquid – regional product...

From 1970 onwards, ten Liège confraternities defending the gastronomic traditions of Liège folklore created the Union des Groupements du Folklore Gastronomique de la Province de Liège. It is worth recalling that it was the first official organisation of confraternities in Belgium and that it served as an example for all the structures that followed. This Folklore Union has progressively attracted new members, in order to arrive at the current figure of more than 48 recognised confraternities.

Circuit de Spa-Francorchamps

Designed in 1921, the original 14.981 km track originally took on the shape of a triangle linking Francorchamps, Malmedy and Stavelot and used public roads open to traffic during normal hours. The 24 hours of Spa-Francorchamps were organised for the first time there in 1924, and the Belgian Grand Prix from the following year onwards.

At the time, the designers wanted to create a very fast circuit, and the planning undertaken over time reflects this thinking. Thus, the “U” bend of the “old customs” (Prussian until 1871, German until 1920) was replaced in 1939 by a shorter and faster bend, the Raidillon de l’Eau Rouge, now the circuit’s most famous.

After several more planning measures and as time went by, the speeds achieved by the cars made the circuit more and more dangerous for the competitors’ safety. Incidentally, Dan Gurney used to say that this circuit “separates the men from the boys”.

The old track was abandoned for good in 1978.

The circuit currently under use has been modified several times and is now a permanent circuit of 7,004 developed metres. It is still a very fast and hilly circuit, resuming a section of the former track which presents characteristics that are appreciated by the world’s greatest drivers in the various categories and where cars are still able to exceed 320 km/h.

Spa-Francorchamps is also famous for its capricious weather. The circuit regularly finds itself varyingly exposed according to segments, dry and stable in some places while other sections are wet and slippery.

Eau Rouge

The most famous section of the circuit is the Raidillon de l’Eau Rouge, where the drivers’ challenge is to thoroughly negotiate this combination. Jacques Villeneuve often loudly proclaimed that he dared to cross the steep hair-pin bend with his foot on the floor. He proved it in 1996 by taking pole position but, on the other hand, came out of this slope very violently in 1998 and 1999. Five years before him, Alessandro Zanardi was also the victim of a major incident on the bend and had to keep away from racing for several weeks.

From October 2006 until May 2007, the circuit was modernised and its safety improved.

Drivers’ comments

“It’s a course that has a long history. Most of the drivers love driving here, the circuit is very long and the bends are very technical. Finding the right balance is an essential factor at Spa, which is fairly complex. The weather is always unpredictable and most of the time changeable. Driving at Spa is a challenge and always exciting.”

- Robert Kubica -

“Spa is one of my favourite circuits. It’s a track that offers everything a driver can wish for. It’s one of the fastest and most difficult circuits in the world with its hills, fast bends, long straight lines and all that gives you a lot of pleasure at the wheel. It’s also a very beautiful circuit in the middle of the forest, but with weather that’s always unpredictable. In fact, the weather can play an essential role during the weekend, even when it’s summer. This is part of what makes Spa exciting. The Eau Rouge bend is legendary, even if we can easily take it today, when the slope is dry.”

- Jenson Button -

of the history of F1 and the atmosphere is special there. All drivers like driving at Spa, which presents one of the most appealing challenges on the calendar. The fast bends are impressive, especially Eau Rouge and Pouhon. It’s always a real pleasure to drive an F1 on this circuit. ”

- Fernando Alonso -

“Like Monaco, Silverstone and Monza, Spa is one of the historic circuits I loved to watch on television when I was younger. It’s also a great place, a circuit where you can push F1 cars to their limits. Coming through Eau Rouge, Pouhon or Blanchimont is incredibly thrilling. Your whole body is at the limit and you keep on pushing to go even faster. I think this circuit should never be off the F1 calendar. ”

- Lewis Hamilton -

| Accessible Tourism

Persons of Reduced Mobility (PRM) represent a third of the population, either permanently or temporarily. In 2007, the Tourism Federation of the Province of Liège acknowledged this fact and decided to act to the benefit of those tourists who are wheelchair-bound, have hearing impairment, visual impairment, difficulty understanding (cognitive deficiency, difficulties with language, reading and/writing), seniors or simply those... in push-chairs. Because “those who can do most can do the least”, the Province of Liège was the first Tourism Federation in Wallonia to create a unit specifically dedicated to PRM.

Its role: to survey the tourist sites in Liège province that offer optimum accessibility through analyses carried out in partnership with professionals; to inform the public about this accessibility in a clear and reliable way; to educate tourism service providers on PRM and offer recommendations with regard to arrangements that help them to get around.

Since March 2015, the Tourism Federation of the Province of Liège has been marketing tourist products from its region thanks to a Receptive Tourism Department. The department is a pivotal point centred on three fronts: business tourism, groups, and individuals. Besides traditional promotion activities, showcasing Liège province's tourism assets is now taking place under the banner of MICE, sales pitches with tour operators and coach companies, as well as through online trading.

Online sales site: www.liegetourisme.be

In the light of the observation that individual tourists have mainly become Internet surfers, the Tourism Federation of the Province of Liège has decided to set up a “touristic marketplace", bringing the offer that can be found and booked in its region (accommodation, activities, tours, etc.) together on a single site: www.liegetourisme.be. This is a virtual store that offers users one sole secure payment for the entirety of their purchases or bookings, whatever the number or type of products they put in their baskets – so that visitors can put their stay together à la carte, with total ease.

This marketplace means that tourists:

- have a varied range for every type of tourism trade: hotel, gîte, campsite, museum, attraction, event, show, shop... on a single site;
- have the range available on a date that suits them, in other words in real time and bookable in a few clicks;
- put together their stays according to their preferences by simply adding what they want to their “basket”;
- only make one single secure payment for the whole of their purchases or booking, regardless of the number of products.

www.liegetourisme.be - The unexpected destination!
Business Tourism

Business tourism

Since the Receptive Tourism Department was set up, the Tourism Federation of the Province of Liège has been recognised by regional and Community authorities as THE Convention Bureau (CVB) of Liège province – that is to say, the sole contact partner in matters of business tourism for the whole of the province. In this regard, among other measures, the FTPL canvasses for clients in local companies, in partnership with economic stakeholders in the province and region; takes part in international trade shows such as IMEX in Frankfurt (May) or EIBTM in Barcelona (November); organises targeted educational tours and press travel; has set up a MICE club in which promotions are realised, etc.

Progressively, the number of overnight stays generated by the organisation of conferences, meetings and seminars in Liège is approaching 165,000 units for the year 2014, compared to about 140,000 in 2010. This puts the Ardent City in first place in Wallonia behind the Brussels-Capital region and the main Flemish towns. It is interesting to note the recent entry of Spa into the top 20 of Belgian towns for business tourism, with some 74,000 overnight stays. It’s therefore no coincidence that the Convention Bureau of the FTPL is called “Liège-Spa Business Land”! Indeed, these two MICE destinations of the province of Liège are very different, but they also complement each other perfectly.

Besides its advisory role, the FTPL’s Convention Bureau intends to continue its marketing logic and is offering a “turnkey” service to companies wishing to entrust it with the full organisation of an event. In addition to not worrying about a thing in return for an indicated, approved and controlled budget, companies will receive just one invoice.

Groups – FTPL, the first port of call for marketing

Aware of the general public’s interest in regions that are bigger than the province of Liège alone, such as Destination Ardenne – situated in three countries (Belgium, Grand Duchy of Luxembourg and France) – or the “Heart of Europe” destination, which also comprises Belgian and Dutch Limburg and the region of Aachen, FTPL has offered itself to its partners as the first port of call for marketing products aimed at groups. It can also look after sales pitches and monitor queries. In order to do this, the FTPL now has an effective team at the service of tour operators and coach companies, which can inspire or suggest stays/excursions through 3 destinations: Destination Ardenne, the Heart of Europe and, of course, Liège province.

A few kilometres away from Liège, the prestigious Spa-Francorchamps circuit hosts legendary races, and the splendid Stavelot Abbey is home, among other attractions, to the track’s museum. Blegny-Mine, a UNESCO World Heritage site, and the Cristalleries du Val Saint-Lambert testify to our ancestors’ abundant industrial past and know-how. The castles of Jehay, Modave and Reinhardstein rise up majestically at the bend of a road. As for nature enthusiasts, they will be enchanted by the Remourchamps Caves, the longest subterranean navigable route in Europe, the duckboard paths of the Cantons de l'Est, the Fens, and more... Renowned for being bon vivreurs, Liège residents are also sophisticated gourmets. EXHIBITION: DARWIN, L’ORIGINAL

From 12 October 2019 until 2 February 2020 at La Cité Miroir in Liège

La Cité Miroir in Liège is set to host an exhibition dedicated to a personality who is at once famous and little-known: Charles Darwin, father of the theory of evolution. Beyond the portrait of a renowned naturalist and scientific biologist emerges a humanist, abolitionist and pioneer of animal and human ethology, for whom empathy and collaboration were also the result of evolution.

Realised in 2015 by Cité des sciences de Paris in partnership with the Muséum national d’Histoire naturelle, the exhibition offers a voyage into the singular and fecund thinking of this iconic personality, author of the seminal work On the Origin of Species by Means of Natural Selection. Visitors are guided through an interactive, multi-subject trail, amid an immersive graphic universe. Strolling through the lush, luxuriant vegetation that surrounds them, they follow the path on a journey of exploration through Darwin’s work and the Victorian imagination.

HYPERREALISM SCULPTURE

Ceci n’est pas un corps.
22.11.19 - 03.05.20

“Hyperrealism” is an art movement that began in the United States in the 1970s. Shunning abstraction, the hyperrealist artist seeks to achieve a meticulous representation of nature, to the point that observers sometimes wonder if they are in the presence of living bodies. The works are sometimes amusing, sometimes disturbing, but always meaningful.

With a selection of some fifty hyperrealist sculptures by leading international artists (George Segal, Ron Mueck, Maurizio Cattelan, Berlind De Bruyckere, Duane Hanson, John De Andrea, and others) the exhibition “Ceci n’est pas un corps. Hyperrealism – Sculpture” will illustrate the evolution of the human figure in the works of hyperrealist sculptors from the 1970s to the present day. The selection will highlight different key issues in this approach to figurative realism and show how our perception of the human body has continuously evolved.

The title of the exhibition, borrowed from Magritte and his famous pipe, is no more innocent than was his. “What is art?” the artist seems to ask the audience. As detailed and perfectly modelled as the contours and the texture are on the real object, what is its transposition on the canvas if not the illusion of this real? It’s as if the artist got as close to the real as he could, only to see it escape his brush. And, more fundamentally, is it the function of art to encapsulate the real?

Liège seized a unique opportunity to participate in the world tour of the exhibition, which was presented at the Museum of Fine Arts of Bilbao (Spain), at the Museum of Contemporary Art of Monterrey (Mexico), at the National Gallery in Canberra (Australia) and at the Kunsthall of Rotterdam; everywhere with considerable success. In Rotterdam it attracted no less than 230,000 visitors in less than three months!

Over three decades, the exhibition highlights the particular moments of interplay between the work of this exceptional artists and the evolution of American society, through a multidisciplinary approach.
